Dear Parents

Well, we can finally say that we have made it to half term – the longest one in the history of education! I must say that you have all been amazing: the school staff have totally re-imagined their whole job and really have stepped up to the mark; so many of the children have been so well motivated and keen to get on with their remote learning and you parents – total troopers! Whoever thought that this would be happening, I can't imagine what you must have been going through. You totally deserve a week off!

We will not be setting remote learning for next week. Some of you have had your learning resources delivered already but please DO NOT start these in half term. It is VERY important that you have a week away from the school work. If you want to do anything there is always reading for pleasure. Take the week to recharge your batteries and have some relaxation time. I have also instructed staff that they should have a rest. Please respect the teachers' right to their time off and do not contact them during half term. Their workload has literally tripled this term but there hasn't been a word of complaint from them – they are a fabulous team.

From Monday 22nd February we will resume the remote learning routine – please look on Class Dojo for your timetable (but not until Monday 22nd!) The teachers will be then back to approving and giving feedback on the learning that you post - there is simply not enough time to comment on everything that we receive.

We will wait with anticipation to see what is suggested from March 8th, I expect I will find out just as I am leaving for school in the morning!

Have a very lovely half term everyone and we will resume when we've all finished sleeping!
Take care.
